The International Religious Liberty Association (IRLA) is an organization that advocates for religious freedom and human rights around the world. It is committed to promoting the principles of religious freedom, tolerance, and peaceful coexistence, and works to protect the rights of individuals to practice their beliefs without fear of persecution or discrimination. The IRLA is a non-sectarian organization and welcomes members from a diverse range of beliefs.

OUR HISTORY

The IRLA was founded in 1893 by a group of Seventh-day Adventists who were concerned about religious persecution and discrimination. Originally called NARLA, the organization was created to advocate for the religious freedom of all people, regardless of their faith or background. Today, the IRLA continues to advocate for religious freedom and human rights through education and collaboration with individuals and organizations around the world.

OUR LEGACY

IRLA's commitment is to advocate for religious freedom as a fundamental human right for all people. The IRLA seeks to achieve this goal through various activities, including world congresses, meetings of experts, and partnerships with various governmental and non-governmental organizations worldwide. IRLA addresses religious freedom issues and provides support and resources to individuals and communities facing persecution. Finally, IRLA fosters dialogue and cooperation among people of various faiths and philosophical persuasions.

“To deny people their human rights is to challenge their very humanity.”

—NELSON MANDELA

Freedom of thought, belief, and conscience is a sign, a symbol, and a seal of our humanity.

Humans are not simply biological beings, material entities which can be disposed of at will.

Humans have a mysterious, unquantifiable component which is best described as a spiritual quality. To be human is not simply to have a consciousness of being.

Humans are conscience bearers, which qualifies humans as moral beings. Human conscience, and the God-given freedom to exercise it, is pivotal to what it means to be human. To protect this gift of conscience, freedom of religion or belief is therefore an essential component of human identity.

On the occasion of the 75th anniversary of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), a core purpose of the 9th International Religious Liberty Association (IRLA) World Congress is to mobilize governments, civil society, and religious organizations to embrace every person’s full humanity, dignity, and rights.

The Congress will emphasize the responsibility to respect every human person by underlining the sacredness of each human person.

To accomplish this lofty goal, a rebirth—a New Renaissance—is required in the way each of us understands the importance of every human person. As participants relate, reconcile, and renegotiate their engagements, they will rediscover the infinite value of every human person.

Celebrating IRLA's 130 years of international advocacy for religious freedom, researchers, historians, legal scholars, philosophers, theologians, sociologists, and experts in related disciplines will bring their bricks to constructing a wholistic understanding of religious freedom.

It will take this collective mobilization of all participants of goodwill to foster healing, wholeness, and health in human relations. Today, our world needs it most.

Ganoune Diop, Ph.D.

IRLA Secretary-General

We welcome each one of you to the 9th International Religious Liberty Association (IRLA) World Congress. As the world's oldest religious liberty association, the IRLA is commemorating 130 years of advocacy for a cause based on the fundamentals of human dignity: freedom of thought, conscience, religion, and ensuring that all have the right to worship God (or not) as they choose.

Each one of us here for this conference is a vital participant in the effort to advance the cause of religious liberty. Each one of us has a role to play as we work to strengthen human rights and the right to freedom of conscience.

We desire that this conference be a multidimensional effort. As we meet together, we ask that you help by suggesting steps that can contribute to a concrete plan of action for advancing religious liberty. We look forward to meeting and talking with each of you.

Ambassador John Nay

IRLA President

Distinguished ladies and gentlemen, dignitaries from various parts of our world, we are honored to welcome you at this 9th edition of the International Religious Liberty Association (IRLA) World Congress. This year, we celebrate 130 years of advocacy for freedom, specifically a compound freedom: freedom of thought, conscience, choice, religion, or belief.

Re-envisioning, re-equipping ourselves, and renewing our resolve to promote this most essential goal of freedom deserves our mobilization to be here together at the General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists world headquarters.

Building a better world together is part of our vocation of being human and humane.

We deeply thank you for believing in our common humanity and for working to affirm the dignity of all human beings, based on a conviction that every person is an inviolable sanctuary of human conscience.

We welcome you from the depth of our hearts.

We wish us all a rich and rejuvenating IRLA World Congress.

Ganoune Diop, Ph.D.

IRLA Secretary-General

Ambassador Sam Brownback, J.D.

Co-President of International Religious Freedom Summit; former U.S. Ambassador-at-Large for International Religious Freedom; former U.S. senator and congressman; former governor of Kansas.

Throughout his distinguished career as a statesman and diplomat, Ambassador Brownback has demonstrated a deep commitment to defending the fundamental right of every individual to practice his or her faith without fear of persecution or discrimination. As the U.S. Ambassador-at-Large for International Religious Freedom, he was a consistent advocate for oppressed religious communities worldwide, working to promote interfaith dialogue, respect, and understanding.

Ambassador Brownback's leadership and vision have been instrumental in crafting and implementing policies that prioritize the protection of religious minorities, seeking to ensure their safety, and advocating for their rights in the face of adversity. His strategic engagement with governments, religious leaders, and civil society organizations has proven instrumental in fostering meaningful change and inspiring hope in countless lives.

Azza Karam, Ph.D.

Former Secretary-General of Religions for Peace; Member, U.N. Secretary-General's High Level Advisory Board on Effective Multilateralism.

Dr. Karam's vision for a harmonious world is exemplified through her significant contributions to various interfaith initiatives. As the driving force behind numerous dialogues and forums, she has brought together religious leaders, scholars, and practitioners from around the globe to engage in constructive conversations, transcending boundaries that once seemed insurmountable. Her deep knowledge and expertise in theology, combined with her ability to connect with individuals from diverse religious traditions, have allowed her to navigate complex discussions with compassion and diplomacy. Dr. Karam's commitment to inclusivity ensures that all voices are heard and respected, creating an environment conducive to fostering genuine understanding and appreciation for each other's beliefs and values.

Her influential role in various intergovernmental and non-governmental organizations has earned her widespread recognition as a trailblazer in the realm of interfaith dialogue and peace advocacy. She has actively engaged with grassroots organizations, humanitarian agencies, and policymakers to incorporate interfaith perspectives into conflict resolution and peacebuilding processes. Her involvement in practical peace initiatives has made a significant impact on alleviating tensions and promoting cooperation in regions afflicted by interreligious strife.

Bettina Krause, J.D.

Editor of Liberty magazine; former Director of Government Affairs, General Conference of Seventh-day Adventists.

A trained attorney, diplomat, and editor, Dr. Krause has consistently articulated a clear vision for protecting freedom of conscience and religious liberty. As a former Director of Government Affairs for the world Seventh-day Adventist Church, she was instrumental in building strong, collaborative relationships between the church's world headquarters and government agencies, non-governmental organizations, and groups advocating for religious freedom.

Editor of the prestigious journal of international religious freedom, Liberty magazine, since 2021, she regularly recruits and publishes incisive commentary and carefully researched articles about protecting freedom of conscience, both in the United States and around the globe. Her commentaries have appeared in many denominational publications and public online platforms, encouraging careful thought about the intersection of personal faith and government legislation.

Ganoune Diop, Ph.D.

Ganoune Diop is Secretary-General of the International Religious Liberty Association (IRLA). He previously served as the Seventh-day Adventists Church's liaison to the United Nations in New York and Geneva, and as its representative within the international community of civic, political, and religious leaders.

Diop has a masters in Exégèses and Theology from Salève Adventist University, a master's degree in Philology from the University of Paris, and a Ph.D. in Old Testament Studies from Andrews University. He holds a diploma in advanced New Testament studies.

He is also an ordained Seventh-day Adventist minister, and has served as a local church pastor. He was previously a professor of Philology, Biblical Languages, Exegesis, Theology, and Comparative Religions and World Philosophies.

Dr. Diop was born in Dakar, Senegal, and he and his wife, Helene, have three adult children. He is a concert flute soloist, who also loves art and literature.

Nelu Burcea, Ph.D.

Nelu joined the IRLA team as Deputy Secretary-General in October 2015. His task has been to develop relationships with various international institutions on behalf of the IRLA.

Dr. Burcea served previously as director for Communication and Public Affairs and Religious Liberty for the Adventist Church in Romania. He was formerly director of the Romanian Adventist Media Center, which includes the Speranta television network, and Voice of Hope radio network. He has served as a local church ordained pastor and has led numerous initiatives in Europe and the United States.

Nelu holds a Ph.D. in Economics specializing in Business Ethics and Human Dignity, and a master's degree in Management of Business Development. He has completed postgraduate study in Mass-Media, Marketing, and Diplomatic Protocol, and postdoctoral research at Harvard University on religious freedom.

Bill Knott, Ph.D.

Bill Knott is a Deputy Secretary-General of the IRLA, and responsible for the organization's interface with the U.S. Congress, the White House, and the international diplomatic corps.

Before joining the IRLA team in January 2023, Dr. Knott was the editor and executive publisher of Adventist Review and Adventist World, the international journals of the global Seventh-day Adventist Church. Beginning in 1979, Bill served for 18 years as a pastor in congregations ranging in size from six to 1800. He earned a M.Div. from the Seventh-day Adventist Theological Seminary and a Ph.D. in American Religious History from George Washington University in Washington, D.C.

In his role with Public Affairs and Religious Liberty (PARL), Dr. Knott focuses on building networks with legislators, non-governmental organizations, and embassies who can advance the IRLA's interests in legislation, collaboration, and protecting religious freedom around the globe. He has authored hundreds of articles in 44 years of service.

His wife, Deborah, is a senior systems and technology manager in Human Resources at the Seventh-day Adventist Church's world headquarters in Silver Spring, Maryland. The Knotts have two married sons.

Tabitha Osindo, B.A.

Tabitha Osindo is a senior editorial assistant with the IRLA. She holds a B.A. degree in Political Studies from Washington Adventist University, and worked at the world headquarters for six years before joining the IRLA team at the end of July. Originally from Kenya, Tabitha is fluent in English and Swahili.

Geoffrey Fowler, B.S.

Geoffrey Fowler is an intern with the IRLA. He graduated in December 2022 from Southern Adventist University with a B.S. in Public Relations and a minor in Political Economy. A native of Georgia, Geoffrey also interned at WTCl, the PBS affiliate in Chattanooga, Tennessee, USA.

The Space We Share

The 9th World Congress of the International Religious Liberty Association (IRLA) is being hosted in the world headquarters of the Seventh-day Adventist Church. The IRLA is a multi-faith, multi-national organization that for 130 years has advocated for the religious freedom of all peoples, and it has often been joined in that advocacy by the Seventh-day Adventist Church.

The headquarters building, opened in 1988, is the workspace for more than 600 persons who help to coordinate the mission of the 22 million-member denomination. That mission is expressed in ministries that focus on health promotion; international humanitarian aid and development; care for women, youth, and children; as well as the Church's interface with the hundreds of ethnic groups and faiths in the nearly 200 countries in which the Church is present. The denomination's extensive educational system, including more than 110 colleges and universities, thousands of secondary and elementary schools, and more than 2 million students worldwide is also coordinated from this building. Adventist Development and Relief Agency (ADRA) is one of the globe's foremost development organizations, coordinating projects and local development in dozens of nations through nearly 30,000 employees.

As the workspace for hundreds of Seventh-day Adventists, the environment of the world headquarters reflects the spiritual commitments that undergird the mission coordinated by the men and women who work here. Religious art traces the biblical narrative from Creation to the prophesied Second Coming, much of it focusing on the life and ministry of Jesus of Nazareth. Though many of the depictions of Jesus reflect Northern European influences, Seventh-day Adventist theology clearly understands Jesus to be the divine Son of God, the representative of all nations, races, and ethnicities. Inspirational quotations from the Christian Bible and other sources are also displayed throughout the building.

Please take the opportunity to greet and introduce yourself to the men and women you meet in the hallways during the World Congress. Together with all of them, we welcome you to a place fully committed to ensuring the religious liberty of all human beings in all places.
